

The book Major Findings of First General National Population Census of Georgia in 2002 presents census data on the Georgian population for 2003 as well as data from the previous population censuses and current statistics. Hundreds of enumerators, statisticians and scientists worked on obtaining, processing and analysing vast amount of information from the Census. As a result of this work, today there is a wealth of updated information available for the Government of Georgia, donors and academia comprising the basic demographic information about Georgia, as well as basic socio-economic information.

The book Major Findings of First General National Population Census of Georgia in 2002 can be downloaded from the Population Census web site, created within the UNDP project and hosted by the State Department of Statistics homepage at: www.statistics.ge
